Intern health monitoring
(Codex on wellbeing at work, Book X, Title 4)

Note to interns:

Here are the documents you must produce on the day of your medical examination:

1. The request for health monitoring, filled out by the employer with whom you are completing your internship;
2. Your national register number or a copy of your ID card;
3. The risk assessment of your internship’s location, provided by the employer with whom you are completing your internship;
   This risk assessment includes:
   • The requirement for health monitoring
   • The nature of mandatory vaccines and tests
   • The requirement for immediate preventive measures related to maternity protection
4. Your vaccination card; if you do not have it, please contact your primary care doctor to obtain immunization data (hepatitis A and B, tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis, measles, rubella, mumps).

‘Intern’ means any student who, as part of a teaching programme organized for an educational institution, works for an employer under similar conditions as workers employed by said employer, in order to build professional experience.

This means the regulation does not apply to work shadowing and company visits.

Article X.4.3. – The employer shall carry out, in accordance with Article X.3.3, an assessment of the risks to which interns may be exposed, and determine what prevention measures must be implemented.

Note:
- This risk assessment may be the same as for other workers in the company, if the intern is exposed to the same risks as them; alternatively, it may be the educational institution’s risk assessment, with amendments made based on specific factors in the company.

Article X.4.5. – Before assigning an intern to a position or activity that requires health monitoring, the employer shall give the intern, and the educational institution in which this intern is enrolled, a document providing information about:

1. A description of the position or activity that requires health monitoring;
2. All preventive measures required;
3. The nature of the risk that requires health monitoring;
4. The intern’s obligations related to risks inherent to their position or activity;
5. If applicable, any training required for the implementation of preventive measures.

Article X.4.7. – The first employer with whom the intern completes their very first internship shall ensure that this intern, if they are required to undergo health monitoring, be subjected to a preliminary health assessment before starting work.

For each subsequent internship, a new preliminary health assessment shall be conducted only if the intern is exposed to a new risk for which a health assessment has not yet been carried out.

Proof that the intern was subjected to the prior health assessment is provided by the health assessment form referred to in articles I.4.46 to I.4.52, which the intern must provide to each new employer for whom they will work at a later date.

Article X.4.8. – Before putting an intern to work, the employer shall take [...] all measures necessary for the reception and support of interns, in order to promote their adjustment and integration into the workplace and ensure they are able to carry out their work properly.
